After arriving at Havre he went directly to Paris where he remained two days then left for the South of France on his way stopping at Parav le Monial, a celebrated pilgrimage where 200 years ago began the devotion to the Sacred Heart of Jesus. Thence he visited Sacred Heart of Jesus. Thence he visited the small village of Ars, the residence of the saintly priest, Fath-er Vianney, who during the long space of 30 years heard confessions each day for 13 hours. His reputation as confessor was so great that a special line of stages was made to accommodate the immense number of people who desired to confess to him. The next stay of the bishop was at Lourdes, in the southeast of France. It was in the small hamlet at the foot of the Pyrennees that occurred the celebrated apparition in 1858. Ever since this place has been the resort of thousands of pilgrims, as many as 10,000,000 having visited it during the last eight years. From Lourdes the bishop went to Britany, and embarked from Havre on the 12th inst. Such is a short summary of his traveis

Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

It may not be generally known that there is an order in existence in this country composed of veteran officers of the war of the rebellion, called the Military Order of the Loyal Legion, which is divided into three classes. The first class includes officers who have been honorably discharged, having served their country well and faithfully. The second class consists of the oldest sons of the first class and the third class is comprised of distinguished citizens who rendered especial aid to the country during the rebellion. This order is divided into several commanderies, the total membership of which on February 1, 1887, was 4160, as follows; Pennsylvania commandery 562 companions, New York 557, Maine 71, Massachusetts 607, California 512, Wisconsin 146, Hilmois 261, District of Columbia 367, Onio 441, Michigan 126, Minnesota 125, Oregon 40, Missouri 116, Nebraska 85, Kansas 105 and Iowa 36. discharged, having served their country

AGRICULTURAL EXPERIMENT STA-

A List of Experiments to be Conducted the Coming Season.

As is well known, the State Agricultural Experiment Station has no farm of +8 its own, and hence it must rely on the farmers of the State for the land on which to conduct the series of experiments that are to be carried out this summer. It is most modern style and it is elaborately desirable that these experiments be tried in each part of the State. They are as follows:

1. The testing of new fodder plants to see if they are adapted to our soit and climate.

a. Alfaifa, a species of clover, requires land well drained, and from which the snow does not blow off in the winter; sown broadcast, used for hay or green feed; does not die out like ordinary clover.

b. Cow pea sown in drills, and colitivated like beans, makes a very heavy growth of excellent fodder; used only for green feed; can be grown on poor, weedy soil, but does best on a soil naturally rich in polash.

a. Horse beans, sown broadcast with barley or oats that are to be cut for hay, to increase the nutritionsness of the fedder.

2. Tests with terfliners. The work with fertilizers will be confined to a single line of inquiry, namely to ascertain whether fodder plants can use phosphoric acid when it is supplied in the cheap form of undissolved bone black. These experiments will be tried on permanent grass and only as it will take two or more years to determine how much benefit has been received from the fertilizer. The phosphates will be supplied.

Prospect of a Poor Sugar Season in Vermont.

"Forbes" writes the Boston Journal as follows: The production of maple sugar in Vermont this year promises to be much less the average yield of former seasons, The State annually produces about 11,000, 000 pounds, but the lateness of the season and prevailing climatic conditions make the propect of a good sugar crop rather poor. The great depth of snow everywhere is likely to prove a hindrance to sugar making, while the fact that there is little will provide the means to meet their moderate actual expenses at his Rest Cure.
